

Visibility is Critical to Capture Motorists' Attention AND

Having cameras on your bicycle and/or helmet will “capture” motorists who purposely disregard bicyclists’ safety or are not paying attention.

Wearing bright clothing, adding reflective tape to your helmet, using lights at both night and daytime, and adding bright colors to your bike will make it more likely that motorists will see you.

CYCLING WITH CAMERAS

Steve Weaber has been using the Cycliq brand cameras/lights for several years. He recommends that you shouldn't be without them or something comparable. Why? Because he has been successful in more than one instance when motorists, whether irate or just driving unsafely, have buzzed or confronted him. Either way, these motorists have not followed the four foot passing law. His dealings with the local police by using the cameras have been a “win/win”. The videos gave them the necessary evidence to hands down prove what he told them. There is no he said, she said, between his version of the incidents and the motorists'. The result was that the motorists were cited. “This type of camera/light system has been definitely worth every penny to me” says Weaber.
